

My learning journal was maintained through this course, and was meant to be an ongoing reflection of my studies and me. It comprised a major component of the class. I found the learning journal both challenging and rewarding because it forced me to think deeply.

The learning journal can be found here: <http://pyvndmobile.blogspot.com>
It is password-protected, so please contact me to discuss if you are interested in reading it. Please see my teacher's comments about the learning journal below.

A1 Learning Journal

Once the status becomes Read or Graded, you cannot submit changes unless your instructor returns your assignment to you as Ungraded.

Due Date:	Lock Date:	Status:	Weight:	Grade:
04/24/2009	N/A	Graded	25 % of final grade	25

Comments:

Journal was very well done. You took a lot of latitude but i've come to expect that from you. You used each reading/occasion as a jump-off for really interesting musings and reflections that tied learning and DE into your life, work, and thoughts at many levels. It was far-reaching but creative and thoughtful. I really enjoyed it. On the adjective side, i would not describe your online presence as 'relaxed' but then maybe i missed something! Energetic and intense would be more like it, from my perspective. Regardless, you got the job done.

Graded by: Dianne Conrad on 05/01/2009 20:42:01

Going the Distance

Author: Peyvand Ghofrani

Submitted: 04/25/2009 13:40:22

(Last Modified: 04/25/2009 13:40:21)